The cigarette holder (1) which incorporates a filter (4) also incorporates a strip of material (2) at the other end which acts as an extinguisher. A cigarette with a conventional filter tip (5) can be inserted into the end with the strip, and the main filter (4) can project from the other end by about two thirds of the length.

The extinguisher strip can be of aluminium, mica or asbestos paper. The cigarette can be inserted by any part of its full length so that a part can remain unburnt as required. The holder can be made of a paper strip wound into a cylinder, and its end can be folded over so that the extinguisher can be attached to it.
